Introduction to Terms and Themes

Description:

This course offers a survey of the history of contemporary art, 1948-present. Themes include curating decolonization, Afro-Atlantic histories, neo-Dada, gestural painting, Pop art, Fluxus, happenings, performance art, art and the mass media, interactive art, electronic art, conceptualism, Black portraiture, Afrofuturism, eco-art, and bio-art.

Goals and Outcomes:

- Define and understand the following terms: modernism, postmodernism, contemporary art, and the avant-garde.
- Identify the salient characteristics of contemporary art and the themes listed above.
- Gain knowledge of the history and theory of contemporary art.
- Improve skills of public speaking, engagement, and discourse in class.
- Improve research skills.
- Improve expository writing skills.

Requirements:

Students are required to attend every class, complete all assignments (reading, writing, in-class presentations, and exams), and participate with candor, verve, and commitment in class.

Mode of Class:

All class meetings are in-person.

Reading Assignments:

All reading assignments are available through library reserves accessible at elearning.

Teachback – I teach! You teach! We all teach! (25% x 2 = 50%)

Polymathic intermedia artist and engineer Gordon Pask coined the word “teachback” fifty years ago to identify the generative circular feedback between teachers and students that constitutes learning on both sides. Pask argued that teaching must have a component of learning and, likewise, learning of teaching. In this class teachback identifies short presentations made by students during the first half of each class based on short essays they’ve written about the reading assignment from the prior week. Students make two teachback presentations over the semester. Each is based on the reading and one work of art the student has chosen. The work can come from inside or outside the reading. If there are two essays assigned in one week, students choose only one essay on which to focus. Details about the assignments and the teachback presentation schedule are posted at elearning.

Mid-Term and Final Exams (25% x 2 = 50%):

There are two exams in the class, a mid-term exam on March 7 and a final exam the date of which is TBA. They have two components: slide identification and short essay. In the first portion of each exam, students identify 20 works of art from memory from a list of 35 located in a review sheet distributed two weeks prior; in the second portion, students choose their two favorite works of art they have learned about in class up to that point, identifying it by the artist’s name, title of work, and date. Students then write why the work of art is important in history and to them personally. The final exam is not cumulative.

Grades:

Teachback #1	25%
Teachback #2	25%
Mid-Term Exam	25%
Final Exam	25%
TOTAL	100%

Dada is not an art style, but an anti-militaristic and anti-aesthetic attitude.

The basic attitude of early Dada was spontaneous performance rather than a didactic program.

Dadaism by Tristan Tzara (né Samuel Rosenstock), 1918/1922

There is a literature that does not reach the voracious mass. It is the work of creators, issued from a real necessity in the author, produced for himself. It expresses the knowledge of a supreme egoism, in which laws wither away. Every page must explode, either by profound heavy seriousness, the whirlwind, poetic frenzy, the new, the eternal, the crushing joke, enthusiasm for principles, or by the way in which it is printed. On the one hand a tottering world in flight, betrothed to the glockenspiel of hell, on the other hand: new men. Rough, bouncing, riding on hiccups. Behind them a crippled world and literary quacks with a mania for improvement.

I say unto you: there is no beginning and we do not tremble, we are not sentimental. We are a furious Wind, tearing the dirty linen of clouds and prayers, preparing the great spectacle of disaster, fire, decomposition. We will put an end to mourning and replace tears by sirens screeching from one continent to another. Pavilions of intense joy and widowers with the sadness of poison. Dada is the signboard of abstraction; advertising and business are also elements of poetry.

I destroy the drawers of the brain and of social organization: spread demoralization wherever I go and cast my hand from heaven to hell, my eyes from hell to heaven, restore the fecund wheel of a universal circus to objective forces and the imagination of every individual.

Philosophy is the question: from which side shall we look at life, God, the idea or other phenomena. Everything one looks at is false. I do not consider the relative result more important than the choice between cake and cherries after dinner. The system of quickly looking at the other side of a thing in order to impose your opinion indirectly is called dialectics, in other words, haggling over the spirit of fried potatoes while dancing method around it. If I cry out:
Ideal, ideal, ideal,

-Knowledge, knowledge, knowledge,
-Boomboom, boomboom, boomboom

I have given a pretty faithful version of progress, law, morality and all other fine qualities that various highly intelligent men have discussed in so many books, only to conclude that after all everyone dances to his own personal boomboom, and that the writer is entitled to his boomboom...

An art, which is forever trying to collect its limbs after yesterday's crash. The best and most extraordinary artists will be those who snatch the tatters of their bodies out of the frenzied cataract of life, who, with their bleeding hands and hearts, hold fast to the intelligence of their time.

“It is true I am opposed to war; that is to say I am opposed to any system that coerces me. From an aesthetic point of view, on the other hand, I rejoice over every German who dies a hero’s death on the field of honor (how touching!). To be a German means invariably to be crude, stupid, ugly, fat and inflexible - it means to be unable to climb up a ladder at forty, to be badly dressed - to be a German means: to be a reactionary of the worst kind; it means only one amongst a hundred will, occasionally, wash all over.

One asks oneself how it is possible that there are millions of people completely lacking a soul, unable to observe real events soberly, people whose dull and stupid eyes have been blinkered ever since they were small, whose minds have been crammed with the emblems of stultifying reaction, such as God, fatherland, and militarism. How is it possible to boast publicly that we are one of the most enlightened nations - when the worse possible principles are already disseminated in schools - principles which, from the very beginning, gag every vestige of freedom of the individual, but instead educate him to become one who follows the crowd, devoid of independent thought, feelings or will.”

"GUILFISH'S" PRIZE-WINNING
SOLUTION OF ARMORY PUZZLE.

A Mathematical Solution.

Being in the fourth dimension, the artist sees all around the other three dimensions, sees all sides of the lady at once. He paints what he sees. If properly cut out and pasted together, the apparently unrelated spaces form the perfect statue of a nude lady in the act described.

William Silva,

1326 New York Ave., Washington, D. C.
Mar. 5, 1913.

"Veritable Brain-Storm."

You ask for a solution of the mysterious "nude descending a stairway," in fifty words. Why fifty when one will do it? The mystery is all in the wrong translation of the title which is thus:

"Nude descending with stairway."

How plain everything is at once.

If permissible, here is another solution, but I am more fond of the first one. The painter, never having seen a nude lady, sees one on a fine morning in the month of May, which incident and time makes him rather confused. The picture plainly shows this emotion. A veritable brain-storm.

Yours very truly,

Gustave Wiegand.

Carnegie Hall, N. Y., Mar. 6, 1913.

Blots of Flesh Color.

The painter probably watched a nude figure rush down a dark staircase and tried to put on canvas the blots of flesh color he saw in that moving picture. As the colors are not true, he either has defective

The Nude Lady and the Stairway

Title of a Cubist picture at the Armory Show.

Now this is asked on Hudson's banks

And not on shores of Niger;

Our lady's on a stairway placed,

There's no sign of a tiger.

At least the "Cubist" says she is

He who hath so devised her;

No stair nor dame can we discern

And so we're none the wiser.

If "art concealeth art"—when then

This "Cubist" is a master,

For he hath hidden stair and dame

Beneath some brown courtplaster.

Oh—Saints, Madonnas, visions fair,

Of Raphael and of Lippi.

Must we forsake Ye—and embrace

Bad dreams by painters "Dippy"?

Perish the thought—with masters old;

We'll still walk woodlands shady,

Still be inspired by visions fair,

Scat! "Stairway and Nude Lady."

André Breton (1896-1966)

First Surrealist Manifesto (1924) by ANDRÉ BRETON

We are still living under the reign of logic, but the logical processes of our time apply only to the solution of problems of secondary interest. The absolute rationalism which remains in fashion allows for the consideration of only those facts narrowly relevant to our experience. Logical conclusions, on the other hand, escape us. Needless to say, boundaries have been assigned even to experience...In the guise of civilization, under the pretext of progress, we have succeeded in dismissing from our minds anything that, rightly or wrongly, could be regarded as superstition or myth; and we have proscribed every way of seeking the truth which does not conform to convention. It would appear that it is by sheer chance that an aspect of intellectual life - and by far the most important in my opinion — about which no one was supposed to be concerned any longer has, recently, been brought back to light. Credit for this must go to Freud....

It was only fitting that Freud should appear with his critique on the dream. In fact, it is incredible that this important part of psychic activity has still attracted so little attention. (For, at least from man's birth to his death, thought presents no solution of continuity; the sum of dreaming moments - even taking into consideration pure dream alone, that of sleep - is from the point of view of time no less than the sum of moments of reality, which we shall confine to waking moments.) I have always been astounded by the extreme disproportion in the importance and seriousness assigned to events of the waking moments and to those of sleep by the ordinary observer. Man, when he ceases to sleep, is above all at the mercy of his memory, and the memory normally delights in feebly retracing the circumstance of the dream for him, depriving it of all actual consequence and obliterating the only determinant from the point at which he thinks he abandoned this constant hope, this anxiety, a few hours earlier. He has the illusion of continuing something worthwhile. The dream finds itself relegated to a parenthesis, like the night.

Max Ernst, Two Children Are Threatened by a Nightingale, 1924

Inspired by a "fevervision" while sick when a child...

We see a small nightingale hovering above two young girls. One girl moves toward the nightingale, brandishing a large knife. The other lies on the verdant grass in a faint. To the right of this unfolding drama, a man steps lightly across the roof of the house. He holds a child in one arm and reaches out the other to the knob protruding at the edge of the picture, as if it will lead him to some escape from this scene. (moma.org)

Salvador Dalí, Persistence of Memory, 1931 -- Dalí described these forms as “nothing more than the soft, extravagant, solitary, paranoid-critical Camembert cheese of space-time.”

Salvador Dalí, A Giraffe Aflame, 1935

Diagram of the inner workings of the Paranoid-Critical Method: limp, unprovable conjectures generated through the deliberate simulation of paranoiac thought processes, supported (made critical) by the "crutches" of Cartesian rationality.

spontaneous method of irrational knowledge based on the interpretive critical association of delirious phenomena.
